PRESIDENT URGES ARMS REDUCTION

GHOULS DRIVEN FROM GANGSTER'S GRAVE; FIRE ON CARETAKER

Police Mystified By Invasion Of "Red"
Barker's Grave

CHICAGO, June 22.—A band of ghouls seeking to rob the grave of George (Red) Barker, slain claimant of the gang power of Al Capone, was driven from Mount Carmel cemetery in a heated gun battle early today.

Police were mystified by the strange grave robbery attempt made by four or five men in a large truck.

The ghouls riddled the automobile of Joseph Sobol, cemetery caretaker, when he discovered the men huddled about the gangster's grave. From the fact the men escaped in a large truck police believe they planned to steal Barker's body.

Another theory was that papers containing information valuable to Barker's gang associates were buried with his body.

It was first thought the men planned to steal the expensive floral offerings which were piled about the grave after the typical gangster ceremonial Monday. This was discounted however by Sobol who said the men were tossing the flowers to one side as he approached and were apparently about to open the grave.

When the caretaker surprised the ghouls at their work, they opened fire on him. He fired back several times but his gun jammed. The would-be grave robbers continued to fire as they made their escape, and crippled the caretaker's automobile.

Barker, a power high in Chicago gangs, was slain in a machine gun ambush early last Friday in what police believed was a fight for control of the organization once dominated by Capone.

KILLS MAN IN CHERRY THEFT

Four Others Shot By Owner of Tree

LORAIN, O., June 22.—One youth was killed and four others wounded, one seriously, when a Lorain resident opened fire with a shotgun as the five were stealing cherries from the back yard of his home here today.

The victim was John Weeski, 23, killed instantly when shotgun slugs penetrated his heart. Edward Dominski, 20, one of the wounded, is in serious condition in St. Joseph's hospital.

Frank Smathers, 59, a retired railroad man, who fired a double-barreled shotgun charge at the prowlers in the back yard of his home, was held by police.

Police said they would ask that Smathers be prosecuted for manslaughter. The three others wounded were Joseph Kurovski, 21, Joseph Mianczak, 30, and Steve Skierick, 19. None was seriously hurt.

JURY DISMISSED IN FLEMING TRIAL

SIDNEY, O., June 22.—Deadlocked after ten hours deliberation, in the case of Grover Fleming, editor of the Ohio Examiner, on trial for alleged defamation of a woman's character, a jury was dismissed last night by Judge J. D. Barnes in common pleas court here.

The charge, preferred by Mrs. Myrtle Stephenson, an employee of the Shelby County Home, was the result of a story which appeared in the Ohio Examiner, under the caption, "Love Blooms at County Home." The allegedly libelous story involved Mrs. Stephenson and Ed Miller, superintendent. Fleming will go on trial again tomorrow on similar charges filed by Miller.

SEIZE BANDIT AT TRIAL SCENE

PAINTSVILLE, Ky., June 22.—Russell Jennings, Lexington, Ky., was arrested in the courthouse yard here in connection with robbery of the Paintsville National Bank, just as Lawrence Pierce, also of Lexington, was to go on trial as one of the bank robbers. Jennings was recognized by Douglas Turner, son of J. W. Turner, president of the bank and Hobart Meade, both bank employees. Pierce's trial was postponed.

CRITIC IS JAILED

Because he criticized the appointment of a village garage keeper as the receiver for a bank with $1,000,000 in deposits, Don Nixon, Wabash, Ind., editor, above, was sentenced to ten days in jail and fined $100 for contempt of court. Nixon took exception to the appointment made by Judge Frank Switzer, of Wabash county circuit court, on the ground that the garage man had insufficient business experience. The editor said many of the 300 depositors of the bank had complained Nixon was released on bond awaiting decision on an appeal.

HUTTON IMPATIENT WHILE JILTED GIRL PILES UP CHARGES

Cries "Bunk" As Girl
Reveals Betrayal
To Jury

LOS ANGELES, June 22.—Corrupt David L. Hutton, husband of Aimee Temple McPherson Hutton impatiently awaited today his chance to strike back at charges he betrayed a comely nurse under promise of marriage.

"The worm must turn," the 250-pound chortling singer said. Myrtle Hazel Jean St. Pierre, seeks $200,000 from Hutton for asserted breach of promise.

Mrs. St. Pierre neared the end of her direct story and Hutton hoped his attorneys, on cross examination, soon could prove that her recital was "bunk, all bunk," as he insisted to newspapermen.

The evangelist's husband whispered that phrase even when the nurse collapsed on the courtroom floor after she told intimate details of the alleged betrayal.

Mrs. St. Pierre's collapse came at a most dramatic moment. She had just finished telling how Hutton met her, made violent love to her and swept her off her feet with amorous acts and phrases.

"He sat down on the divan that night," she said. "He took me into his arms, crying that I must prove my love for him. He covered me with kisses and swore we already were married in the sight of God. He fell to the floor and dragged me with him."

The nurse was sobbing hysterically. Judge Lester Roth ordered a recess. As Mrs. St. Pierre stepped from the stand, she collapsed.

She was revived and, after the judge cleared the courtroom of all spectators, Mrs. St. Pierre finished the story of the alleged betrayal.

The nurse said that she suggested they get married as he had proposed, and she began to see him less and less often.

Finally he disappeared and the next she knew of him was to hear his voice as it came in the now famous radio broadcast from the nuptial chamber.

She was revived and, after the judge cleared the courtroom of all spectators, Mrs. St. Pierre finished the story of the alleged betrayal.

"It was," she said, "something about his love being deeper than the deepest ocean and bluer than the bluest sea. He said to me, 'Darling, I composed that just for you.'"

YOUTH IS DROWNED
CLEVELAND, O., June 22.—Despite the heroic rescue attempt of a young companion, Edmund Rogowski, 15, drowned in a deep hole in the Cuyahoga River at Brecksville, a suburb of Cleveland.

John Loebl, 15, saved the life of Stanley Turski, 15, a third member of the swimming party.

WHY DID AL AND FRANK BREAK?

Story Of Breach Between Roosevelt And Smith
Told For First Time

(Editor's note:—One of the biggest dramas of modern politics is about to unfold at Chicago where the Democratic national convention meets next week.

A nation waits, intrigued, for developments; and watches for a fight of major proportions between the former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York and his successor in that office, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The populace asks why have these men, the closest of personal and political friends, broken? Why are they now enemies? What could bring to the parting of the ways two men whose political fortunes have been bound by the closest of ties.

In the accompanying article, Thomas L. Stokes of the Washington bureau of the United Press, gives the inside story of this breach. Stokes knows whereof he speaks from long and intimate contact with the Smith-Roosevelt situation.)

By THOMAS L. STOKES

CHICAGO, June 22.—The country is about to witness, in an arena worthy of such an historic event, the climax of a bitter political feud that may seriously involve the hopes of Democratic success in the coming election.

Two formerly close friends, Alfred E. Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt, the famous team of "Al" and "Frank" of only four years ago, will be pitted against one another for the biggest prize their party can offer—the presidential nomination.

Nothing more dramatic, nor filled with more potentiality, has been projected on the American political screen in recent years.

What happened between the two? Roosevelt decided to seek the presidential nomination without consulting his friend and sponsor, who was, after all, the titular head of the Democratic party—and more than that, responsible for pushing him prominently to the fore.

The writer remembers well the night in 1928 that Smith, sitting at the end of a wire at Rochester, N. Y., virtually "bludgeoned" Roosevelt to become the Democratic candidate for governor of New York. Roosevelt was at the Warm Springs, Ga., resort. He pleaded ill health. Finally he yielded. The state convention, Smith's tool, did the rest.

This must be said. Smith needed Roosevelt. He needed his friend to help him carry New York state. That was the political theory on which Roosevelt was "drafted." It didn't work out exactly that way.

Roosevelt carried his end of the load. He was elected. Smith was defeated in New York state and the nation for the presidency.

Roosevelt's stock began to rise mightily, given this start. Smith sank into the background, Roosevelt began to be talked about, as the Democratic candidate for 1932.

His friends started a campaign that he did not openly acknowledge until recent months.

Roosevelt to date has said not one word about his presidential aspirations to Smith.

So a friendship that was becoming famous broke up on the rocks of neglect and personal pique—small things, but such small and human things as have wrecked friendships and fired up political feuds many a time before.

If he ever comes out publicly in this war against his old friend, Smith will criticize Roosevelt on the ground that he is indecisive, does not take positive stands on issues, and it is reported Smith will speak out here this week.

Smith is the dominating type of political "boss" who demands allegiance.

ROOSEVELT CALLS UPON WALKER TO ANSWER SEABURY CHARGES

ALBANY, N. Y., June 22.—Mayor James J. Walker of New York City was called upon today by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt to answer charges preferred against him by Samuel Seabury, counsel to the Hofstadter New York City investigating committee.

Roosevelt sent a letter to the mayor requesting an answer to the Seabury charges and also to allegations filed by two New York City organizations.

The governor informed the mayor that he had requested Seabury to forward him the transcript of testimony which he gave before the committee.

The documents which Seabury sent to the governor after the Hofstadter committee's investigation of the New York City government were accompanied by a summary in which Seabury alleged that Walker's testimony and other evidence bearing on his administration showed he was unfit to hold office.

Seabury charged that Walker's ownership of stock in a company that sold street light fixtures to the city was enough to disqualify him under the law.

ALEXANDER WINTON
DIES; WAS PIONEER
IN MOTOR INDUSTRY

Former Bicycle Maker
Made First Auto
Sale of Record

CLEVELAND, June 22.—Alexander Winton, Sr., 72, pioneer automobile manufacturer, died at his home in Lakewood, a suburb, Tuesday night.

Winton had been in failing health for several months and had weakened gradually since returning to his home here June 2 from his customary winter vacation in Florida.

Along with Henry Ford and Elwood Haynes, Winton was one of the first experimenters with automobiles powered by gasoline engines in the early 90's.

In 1895 Mr. Winton made the first automobile sale in the world. A one-cylindered car he had built was sold to Robert Allison, a mining engineer of Fort Carbon, Pa., for $1,000. Later he bought the car back and gave it to the Smithsonian Institution.

Born in Grangemouth, Scotland, Early in 1860, Mr. Winton had only a common school education. As a boy he was interested in machines and became a bicycle repairman by trade.

He came to the United States at 19 and the story of his wealth and fame from the status of a penniless immigrant was a triumph of perseverance and industry over hardship and discouragement.

For a time he worked in New York shipyards. Then he became an engineer on mail ships plying between New York and South America. With characteristic thrift, he saved enough to start a bicycle manufacturing shop and came to Cleveland to launch his enterprise.

Early in the 90's he began experimenting with gasoline engines. In 1893, according to Mr. Winton's own account, he built his first successful automobile.

In 1897 he made the first automobile trip from Cleveland to New York on an adventurous trip that took ten days of toilsome, weary travel over roads that were almost impassable.

A few years later Winton began building and driving racing cars. He set a world record at Daytona Beach, Fla., with his "Bullet No. 1," in 1902.

Thomas Henderson was Mr. Winton's partner in the original Winton Bicycle Co. This gave way to the Winton Horseless Carriage Co., which later became the "Winton Motor Co."

Funeral services for Winton will be held Friday afternoon.

PROHIBITION SHOT FIRED WHEN SMITH STARTS CAMPAIGN

Battle For Shouse Promised
By Al; Aims
At Roosevelt

CHICAGO, June 22.—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith opened his campaign today for the Democratic presidential nomination with a double barreled attack on prohibition. He counseled unconditional repeal of the eighteenth amendment, preceded by immediate amendment of the Volstead act to increase the alcoholic content of legal beverages.

Smith declared he would go before the convention, if necessary to battle for the election as permanent chairman of J. J. Shouse, who is opposed by the Roosevelt group.

He also declared he had no second choice for the presidential nomination and that he was leading a fight against a "stop Smith" movement which he said began a year and a half ago. He refused to answer whether he would support the ticket in the coming campaign regardless of the person nominated.

Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, N. J., was designated by Smith as his convention floor leader.

He arrived today from New York, hurrying through a cheering throng at the LaSalle St. station and appeared an hour later before 200 reporters in the hotel quarters of J. J. Shouse, executive director of the Democratic national committee.

With Smith's arrival the "stop Roosevelt" command was here ready for business and awaiting the arrival of a potential reinforcement, former Secretary of the Treasury, W. Gibbs McAdoo. Smith's party insisted that there was no "stop" movement underway and that Smith is here to get the nomination for himself.

Meanwhile, there was much speculation as to the course Tammany would take toward the nomination and rumors that it would steer Mayor James Walker to the resolutions committee.

Roosevelt meantime, was conceded more than a majority of the convention delegates as the opposition swung into action, and he believed to be within 100 votes of having the necessary two-thirds majority.

He was so near absolute victory, and yet with such dangerous territory just ahead, that every move on both sides assumed great importance.

Into this dramatic situation advanced today the magic figure of Smith—the "happy warrior" of other days, the man who four years ago, despite humiliating defeat in the electoral college, drew more Democratic votes than any candidate had ever received, 15,000,000 of them. Upon this confident figure, minus the faded brown derby of four years ago, the golden smile a little more grim, not the conquering hero but the fighting veteran, came today.

There was a prospect that another of today's scheduled arrivals, William G. McAdoo, former foe of Smith, would join the latter in the war on Roosevelt.

Before he left New York, Smith said he was not trying to "stop" anybody but was trying to get the nomination. No doubt he felt that way. But in Chicago Smith became the bone and sinew of the stop Roosevelt movement. It was as Chicago saw it, a fight between the two old political partners, with Smith leading the fight to block the man who in the last three Democratic national conventions has taken the platform to urge his nomination for the presidency, the man who was begged by Smith to run for governor on his ticket in 1928, the man who gave to Smith the name of the "Happy Warrior."

On another train speeding westward from New York was a gray haired, blue-eyed, tight lipped man of slight build, a man who would

AUTOIST KILLED

WAPAKONETA, O., June 22.—Raymond B. Fischer, 43, salesman for the Proctor and Gamble Co., Cincinnati, was killed here last night when he ostensibly fell asleep while driving his automobile.

The accident occurred two miles north of here. Another motorist said he saw Fischer's car weave across the road and strike a telephone pole.

A broken neck was the cause of his death.

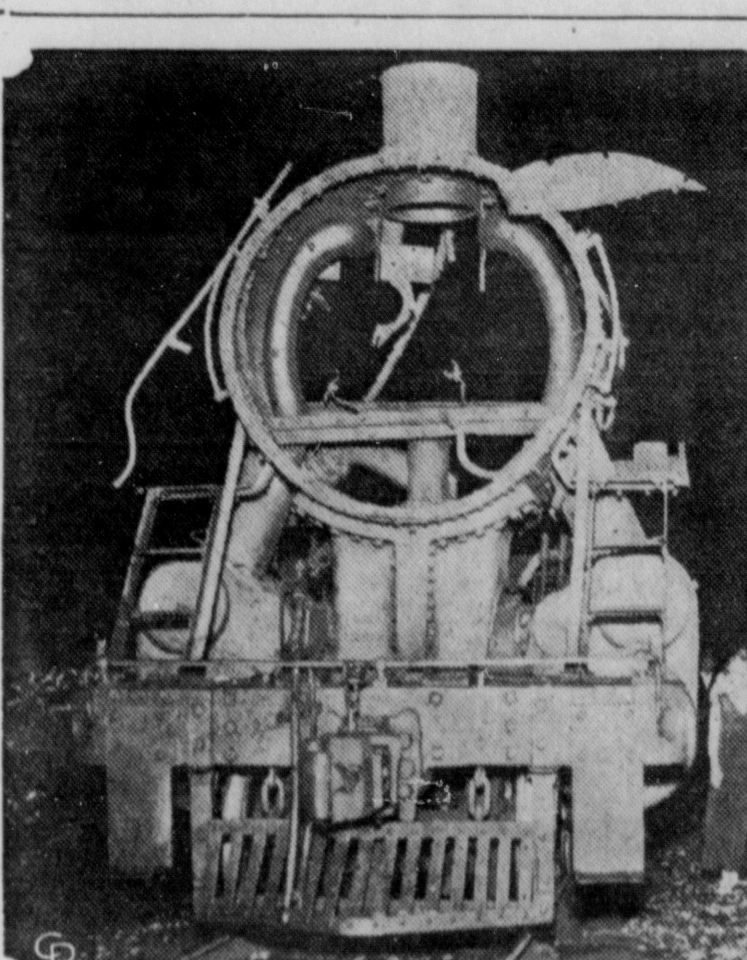

PIQUA MAN SURRENDERS ON CHARGE OF SLAYING WOMAN

COVINGTON, Ky., June 22.—Walter Knowles, 42, of Piqua, O., today surrendered to authorities who had ordered his arrest for questioning in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Nettie Day, 44, of Covington.

W. A. Haines, Troy, O., Attorney, and Bert J. King, attorney of Covington, Ky., accompanied Knowles to the office of Police Chief Herman Faust here. The prisoner declared he was innocent of the crime.

Mrs. Day's body was found in a thicket in Devou Park, June 10.

TWO DIE AS LOCOMOTIVE EXPLODES

This skeleton of a locomotive is all that remains following a freakish explosion, near Pittsburgh, of the giant engine pulling the crack Capitol Limited of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The engineer and fireman were killed when the locomotive blew up, but sleeping passengers in a long string of Pullman cars, on route from Washington to Chicago, were not even shaken.

STATE DELEGATION STARTS TO CHICAGO FOR PARTY MEETING

Delegates To Caucus
Monday To Decide
On Issues

COLEMBUS, O., June 22.—The trek of Ohio's delegates, alternates and onlookers to Chicago for the Democratic convention next week has begun.

Henry J. Brunner, state executive chairman, is expected to reach Chicago this evening and set up headquarters on the 19th floor of the Palmer House.

The delegation is to caucus Monday morning and will then determine its position on permanent organization and prohibition.

Brunner expects to hold at least forty of the fifty-two Ohio votes in line for J. J. Shouse for permanent chairman.

The delegation was said to be at least 80 per cent for an out and out prohibition repeal plank.

If present plans do not miscarry W. A. Julian, Cincinnati shoe manufacturer, will be re-elected national committeeman for Ohio.

Mrs. Bernice S. Pyke, Cleveland welfare director, will be re-elected national committeewoman.

Senator Robert J. Bulkley is slated for the Ohio member of the platform committee, which would indicate the throwing of Ohio's influence in the committee to repeal.

William Norris, of Ripley, elected an alternate in the 6th district, will go as a delegate instead of Harry E. Taylor, Portsmouth publisher, who died after his election.

Four women will sit among the fifty-six delegates under the Ohio standard. Besides Mrs. Pyke, they are Josephine McGowan of Canton, Cleo Cool Schneider, of Zanesville, and Ann M. Makley, of Dayton.

Each is a delegate at large with a half vote.

There are no women among the forty-four district delegates, but there are eleven among the alternates, who also will have a place on the convention floor. The convention credentials and seats are all the delegates and alternates get free. Otherwise each pays his or her own expenses.

MURDER CHARGE IS DISMISSED

IRONTON, O., June 22.—A first degree murder charge against Oscar Brammer, of Chesapeake, held in connection with the deaths of Pete Davis, 18, "Happy" Fielder, 39, and Robert Harmon, 26, all of Huntington, W. Va., was dismissed late Tuesday.

Bodies of the three were found in the Ohio River at different times after their disappearance last December.

Prosecutor L. D. Andrews said evidence was insufficient to hold Brammer. The trio had been drinking and according to one witness, were last seen crossing the river from the Ohio to the Kentucky side. It was believed their skill capsize.

Relatives and West Virginia authorities had feared they were the victims of Ohio moonshiners.

SWEEPING PROGRAM OFFERS ONE-THIRD SLASH IN ARMAMENT

Presents Unexpected And Concise Plan For Problem

WASHINGTON, June 22.—A sweeping proposal to reduce the world's arms by one third and lift a burden of from ten to fifteen billion dollars from the shoulders of the common man during the next ten years was advanced today by President Hoover.

A year and two days after his momentous moratorium proposal, the American President again presented an unexpected and concise plan for dealing with one of the world's greatest barriers to peace—armaments. The proposal was presented to the world disarmament conference at Geneva today.

Every kind of fighting weapon would be reduced or banned under the proposal. Mr. Hoover suggested that not only land armaments should be cut but that there should be a one-third reduction in naval strength under existing treaty levels.

The plan was outlined today by Mr. Hoover before a small group of newspapermen. He read his proposal, emphasizing the fact that it touched all branches of armament. At his side as Secretary of State Stimson, who aided him in drafting the plan.

Attempting to give new life in the flagging Geneva disarmament conference, the President declared that "the time is come when we should cut through the brush and adopt some broad and definite method of reducing the overwhelming burden of armament."

"This," Mr. Hoover said, "would be the most important world step that could be taken to expedite economic recovery."

The proposal on high official authority, is linked in no way with the problem of war debts. It was authoritatively stated that the American delegation has not discussed war debts with European statesmen. Officials here held that to offer a trade of war debts for disarmament would be insulting to Europe.

The plan will not cut the manpower of America's army. It was held that this is already below the strength the European nations will require for internal police protection.

As the naval cuts are based on treaty strength rather than actual strength, scrapping of existing vessels probably will not be necessary. However, the avoidance of building the navy up to the London treaty strength probably would save American taxpayers $2,000,000,000 during the next decade, officials estimate.

The President proposed the following five principles to guide the world toward arms reduction:

"1. The Kellogg-Briand pact, to which we are all signatories, can only mean that the nations of the world have agreed that they will use their arms solely for defense."

"2. This reduction should be carried out not only by broad general cuts in armament, but by increasing the comparative power of defense through decreases in the power of attack."

"3. The armaments of the world have grown up in general mutual relation to each other. And, speaking generally, such relativity should be preserved in making reductions."

"4. The reductions must be real and positive. They must effect economic relief."

"5. There are three problems to deal with, land forces, air forces and naval forces. They are all interconnected. No part of the proposals which I make can be dissociated one from the other."

After enumerating these principles, the President declared:

"Based on these principles, I propose that the arms of the world should be reduced by nearly one-third."

The land force section of the proposal provided that all tanks, chemical warfare instruments and large mobile guns should be scrapped.

He held these weapons to be of offensive. He called also for a one-third cut in all land armies, above the strength required for police needs.

Mr. Hoover took the post-war treaties that disarmed Germany, Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria as a ruler to measure reduction of other armaments. Germany was allowed 100,000 troops for a population of 65,000,000.

"This formula," Mr. Hoover said, "with necessary corrections for powers having colonial possessions, should be sufficient to provide for the maintenance of internal order by the nations of the world."

Simple and direct was the secret.

GREENE COUNTY TAX COMMITTEE PLANS MEETING ON MONDAY

Organized with the sole object of "learning the truth about taxes," the Greene County Inter-Organized Tax Committee, subsidiary of a state-wide organization, will hold its first meeting at 8 p. m. Monday in the offices of the County Commissioners, Court House.

The local committee is composed of ten representatives of diversified interests, including banking, farming, manufacturing, merchant, theatrical and civic.

It is the group's purpose to make a systematic study of taxes and to compile accurate information designed to be useful to taxpayers and taxation bodies of the townships, schools and the county in the preparation of 1933 budgets.

The local committee, in this connection, also plans to make a comparative study of taxes in other Ohio counties of similar size and location.

The local group is composed of the following leading representatives of various organizations:

Banking—M. L. Wolf, cashier of the Citizens National Bank, and R. O. Wead, cashier of the Xenia National Bank and former auditor of Greene County; farming—David Bradstreet, president of Greene County Farm Bureau, and J. H. Shawhan, master of Greene County Pomona Grange; manufacturing—Ed Hunt, Xenia, of the Hunt Broom Factory; merchants—J. Walker Gibney of the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association; Civic—C. R. Titlow of the Osborn Commercial Club; building and loan group—Thomas J. Kennedy, secretary of the Peoples Building and Savings Co.; printing and publishing—Frank L. Smith, of the Smith Advertising Co., Xenia; theatrical—James T. Hibbet, owner of the Bijou Theater.

STREAM POLLUTION PROBED BY STATE OFFICIAL HERE TUESDAY

An investigation to fix responsibility for the deaths of many thousands of fish in Massie's Creek and the Little Miami River over last week end, was gotten under way Tuesday by state officials.

M. B. Troutman, assistant to E. L. Wickliff, chief of the research division of the Ohio Conservation Commission, accompanied by E. D. Stroup, Xenia, Greene County game protector, inspected both banks of the creek and river, surveying thousands of dead fish left in the wake of receding high waters. The tour of inspection carried the two investigators downstream to a point near the Indian Rifle bridge, Warden Stroup said.

Officials of the Hagar Straw Board and Paper Co. at Cedarville were questioned concerning the cause of stream pollution before the state department representative returned to Columbus to make his report to the research division chief.

Warden Stroup said that Frank Hard, Washington C. H., district game protector, and a representative of the state department of health, were expected here Wednesday to continue the investigation.

Following the inspection tour Tuesday, Stroup said that no indication of stream pollution was discovered upstream from the Cedarville paper plant, nor in the Little Miami River above the point where the creek empties into the river north of Xenia.

This fact, the warden indicated, strengthened a belief that the deaths of thousands of fish may have been caused by a fibrous substance contained in waste water reported to have been discharged into the creek from large reservoirs of the Cedarville company's plant.

Good Gardening

HOW TO SUCCEED WITH PLANTS

By DEAN HALLIDAY

"Tell me why it is that some people do so much better with their plants than others do?" my neighbor demanded.

"To succeed with plants one must know their habits and their likes and dislikes," I replied, "and the conditions which they require."

If you have a corner in your garden where the soil is fairly rich, moist, but well drained and more or less protected it is well suited for the cowslip, shasta daisy, scabiosa, pinks, catenella, tiger lilies and varieties of sunflower.

If you have a shady dry place, plant rock plants such as bugle-weed, barrenwort, sedums, and small spring bulbs which bloom before the place becomes shaded.

If there is a spot in your garden with plenty of sun and open to the wind, galliardias will flourish well. For shady moist places, plant forget-me-nots and Japanese iris.

If you have a dry place with strong exposure to the sun, plant hardy annuals such as zinnias, marigolds, sea-lavender, baby's breath and violas.

Among shrubs easy to grow we find the buddleia, which likes a dry place and also forsythia, spirea, Japanese quince and the common lilac.

AS DAWES THINKS

General Charles G. Dawes is a man of wide business experience, acumen and connections and he is not given to hasty or ill considered statements on public affairs. Consequently, when he expresses the belief that "we have reached the turning point in the depression" there is in his words the ring of authority.

"The recovery in the depression will start from the bottom up," General Dawes states, "not from the top down." The real evidences of it are to be looked for in "the mass attitudes of our people" and not in "the shifting opinions of certain sections of it." This explains why the signs of recovery are not more evident at this time. The spectacular phase has not yet been reached. "I would attribute much more importance to the increase of electric power consumption in the Country during the last two weeks," says the former head of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., "than to stock or bond quotations."

This supports the diagnosis of the Wall Street debacle of 1929, which holds that an inflated market collapsed because of the subsidence of buying power behind the stocks that were being bought and sold in it. Those who look to Wall Street as a barometer of business conditions should remember that it is the reflection and not the substance of those conditions. The price of stocks and bonds, which is the mercury in the barometer, ascends or descends, except in periods of speculative hysteria, as the business they represent moves up or down. The thing to keep one's eye on now is, as General Dawes intimates, a deep ground swell that in due course will bring in the tide of general business normality.

General Dawes' reference to the necessity of bringing down taxes through reduction of public expenditures, while not new, will bear a good deal of repetition. The fact that in the last 10 years, while Federal indebtedness has been reduced 31 per cent, there has been a 60 per cent increase in municipal indebtedness, shows where the axe needs to be applied first and most vigorously. The same liquidation in expenditures of Federal, State and municipal administrations which individuals and private enterprises already have effected, General Dawes concludes, would materially hasten the improvement of conditions.

CONFORMS TO TRADITIONS

In announcing that he does not intend to participate in the campaign for his re-election except by making a few major speeches, President Hoover conforms to the tradition which has largely prevailed in the Republican Party for a long time, only, perhaps, going a little further than most of his predecessors have gone. Mr. Hoover also offers the best possible reason for his decision when he says that his undivided attention must be given to the duties of his office.

There have been times in the history of the Country when, with everything running smoothly and no major public questions pressing for solution, the Chief Executive has had time and strength to devote to personal activity. But this is not one of those times.

If we expect periods of war, it is doubtful whether any President of the United States ever has faced as puzzling, and as difficult public problems as those that have confronted Mr. Hoover almost since the day he took office, and still confront him.

Under the circumstances, the statement the President has made, is what was to be expected in view of the record he has for conscientiousness, faithfulness, courage and sacrifice for duty. It would be unreasonable of the Country to expect Mr. Hoover to do any campaigning in the ordinary sense of the word. The Country does not expect it. On the contrary, the Country will appreciate the fact that he is content to perform public duty and let his record of performance speak for itself.

NOT PERMITTED

Advertising by radio is not permitted in Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Holland, Switzerland, Russia or Sweden, a bulletin issued in New York by the National Council on Radio in Education points out. Certain other countries allow but do not encourage it. There is no radio advertising in Great Britain, Germany and Norway permit it outside of normal program hours. The rule in Italy is that it must take the least objectionable form and must not prejudice the artistic quality of programs. The Turks insist that radio advertising be kept distinct from musical numbers.

Apparently some of the other enlightened Governments of the world have a higher appreciation of the value and purpose of radio, as an instrument of education and entertainment, than our own has. They have refused to allow it to become a medium for cheap and nauseating commercial ballyhoo. Where radio advertising is allowed it must be kept within reasonable bounds. The educational and entertainment features of programs, which are what people buy receiving sets to listen to, are protected.

A certain amount of advertising by radio is tolerable. The intolerable thing in this Country is the excess of direct sales clack, which not only takes up the program's time but ruins artistry by incongruity. Once in awhile we discover that other countries do some things better than we do.

MILITARY TRAINING IN SCHOOLS

By GEORGE L. BERRY.

President of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America.

The term "Military Training in Schools" has developed a state of mind in many quarters that the purpose of using Reserve Officers Training Corps in schools was to militarize the school and the students thereof in America and in consequence of this state of mind considerable opposition presents itself. Much of the opposition comes from well-meaning patriotic citizens. From other sources criticisms arise that are ulterior in their classification.

The American Legion's advocacy for military training, and let us call it that, in the schools of our country is an attitude of frankness that is deserving of the most sympathetic consideration of all. It is proposed that the boys of today, the citizens of tomorrow, shall have the benefit of some understanding of the necessity of self-protection, and with that they shall profit physically as well as mentally by the training attendant to such public instructions in the schools of our country.

The development of a war spirit, which must not be associated with the military training in schools, comes not in consequence of developing the facilities of self-protection but from political and economic injustices, and if political and economic injustices become intolerable, then a man's ability to defend himself could not be considered a liability but to the contrary a very definite asset.

There ought to be enough social order, economic justice and religious influence to control the spirit of war without seeking the establishment of a state of helplessness on the part of the citizens of tomorrow. It is my opinion, therefore, that the Reserve Officers Training Corps in school is an aid not only in the education of the youth of our land but is a direct contribution to their physical well-being and offers advantages in the furtherance of citizenship service.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL.

PARIS.—Life around the Dome and the Coupoles is as various and as exotic as ever. These faintly Bohemian, faintly chic restaurants are the rendezvous and, very often, the Waterloo of hundreds of young Americans seeking Art and Life.

Ta other evening, sitting, rather fidgety, in an uncomfortable chair before a table slightly larger than a serving dish, the quiet of the street—rather say the tranquil buzz—was broken by the arrival, in squads and platoons and huge buses of some 500 gendarmes. An unemployed riot had broken out near the Coupoles, and the police quelled the protestations of several dozen pink demonstrators by the process of smotheration.

Paris police don't believe in half measures. For a disturbance which in Manhattan would summon the offices of not more than a dozen of the riot squad, the French constabulary turns out in hundreds. This, and London, are probably the best policed cities in the world; few human foibles in Paris are under the ban, but those that are promptly and severely get squelched.

PARIS BY NIGHT

The dark-to-dawn carryings-on of Paris are still to be encountered, but they are no longer a prairie fire through a town overrun with rich Americans, South Americans, British and French Colonials. The whoopee is concentrated in a few favored spots.

Montmartre, to me the most romantic and the most engaging of Paris neighborhoods, despite the removal of the American holity-toity set to Montparnasse, is almost as deserted as Broadway at 5 o'clock in the morning. Time was when at that hour the district was lively as a county fair.

I talked to Joe Zelli last night. His newly decorated notcha-emporium is tomb-like. Scarcely a customer breaks the repose of a spot which has resounded to the whoops of ten thousand college boys on vacation. The collegiates, it may be noted, are noticeably absent from Paris this year.

THEY STILL ARE HERE

Yet it must not be supposed that the town is by any means deserted. Harry's New York Bar is still lined several deep at the aperitif hour. I saw Sam Hellman there, and Lou Holtz, and Earl Carroll, Elmer Rice and a dozen others equally well known.

Carroll and Holtz were also to be seen at the Montmartre, the one big-business cabaret of the district. Here in a room which is an exact replica of one of the most picturesque squares of the Sacre Coeur sector, laid out with identical bars, bistros and even the trees, the smart crowds gather nightly.

The Americans visiting Paris this year seem to be of a slightly more restrained and dignified cast than those of last summer. They have their fun, but they do it with the dignity of those long accustomed to doing pretty much as they please.

The fact is that the cabin boats are crowded with those who in past years arrived via de luxe suites on the Ile de France, the Bremen and the Mauretania. Now having contracted the habit, they must come to Paris as usual—and if they have less money to spend, they spend it with the new-found gaiety. It is difficult, in this opinion, at least, to be truly gay in 10 rooms at the Ritz.

Chalography is a modern term used to signify engraving on copper and steel sheets.

Chandala is the lowest of the impure classes in the Hindu caste.

Chapala lake is the largest lake in Mexico, covering an area of approximately 1,400 square miles.

Agriculture Seen As Failing To Benefit From Price Rise If Labor Is Unable To Buy

WASHINGTON. — If advancing prices are essential to a restoration of property, then better times will be worse times for nearly every man who works for wages (or a salary, as white-collar hirelings call their stipends) and still has a job when the improvement sets in.

His wages will not buy as much as at present. Higher prices will be the same thing as a pay cut to him. It would not be so bad if most workers had not suffered cuts already.

A great majority of them have, however.

The supposition is that these cuts have corresponded to the reduced cost of living. In cases where this is approximately true the wage earners are as well off now as they were when pay and living costs were correspondingly higher, but they will not be as well off when living costs begin to mount, unless their pay follows suit.

The wage earner certainly is an optimist who believes that his pay will do anything of the sort at all speedily.

Moreover, the supposition that the wage decline has not outdone the decline in the cost of living is based on statistics furnished by folk who prefer to suppose so.

That is to say, they are furnished by employers who have cut wages and by government bureaus under the control of an administration which is extremely unwilling to admit that the labor situation is as bad as it is; it will be recalled how long it continued to deny the seriousness of unemployment, after everyone else knew that it was rampant.

The government experts' trick is to compare wages with prices of raw materials or key commodities, which really have slumped. By this method they get a very satisfactory showing, but the average family seldom buys cotton by the bale or eats steel rails for breakfast.

Having done considerable investigating of my own, my personal conclusion is that, except in a few lines of super-organized union labor, present wages are a trifle below 1914's; that the white collar worker's salary is decidedly below the 1914 figure.

I mean lower in dollars and cents, regardless of the index.

On the opposite hand, anyone who finds his living costs anything like as low as in 1914 is a better buyer than I am.

Goods in consumable form, for the home, have not declined as raw cotton, underground wheat, steel ingots et cetera have. Clothing is cheaper than at its boom peak, but by no means down to pre-war prices. Groceries are cheaper than two or three years ago, but not as cheap as a decade and a half back. Many necessities are hardly any cheaper than in 1928 and 1929.

Before the war $35 would keep a family in moderate comfort. It may be enough to keep a family alive at the 1932 level, but not in much comfort.

The still-employed worker, then, has good reason to dread higher prices. Already pinched, they will pinch him to the point of actual privation.

The argument is that they will revitalize business. With better business, unemployment, at least, will diminish.

Yet even the unemployed of today will go back to work at a lower living standard — a standard not only lower than the standard they enjoyed just before they were thrown out, when the crash came; a standard lower than the ante-bellum standard.

Labor will be "deflated" with a vengeance.

I am uncertain in my own mind whether or not captains of industry deliberately planned its deflation—but I notice that they no longer are talking of the advantage which industry derives from high wages. That concept seems to have gone to the scrap heap.

One thing we are positively assured of, however, is that agriculture will benefit greatly by a rising scale of prices.

Indeed, our farm state lawmakers tell us that we simply have got to inflate our currency—in other words, force prices upward—to enable their constituents to sell their crops at a decent profit.

The truth is that low farm prices unquestionably are largely responsible for the depression and unemployment.

As the farmers grew poorer and poorer, the less they were able to buy in the way of manufactured products, the supply of these products consequently piled up until there was an enormous surplus—and finally the urban industries crashed, for lack of a sufficient market.

Now the idea is to inflate, to make agriculture pay again.

Once more the farmers will be good customers, industry will revive and everyone will be on Easy Street.

It works out all right in theory. But suppose, in the meantime the captains of industry have so "deflated" labor that urban workers no longer are able to buy farm products in any larger quantity than is absolutely necessary to keep body and soul together?

The captains of industry, by themselves, cannot eat much.

It takes numbers, such as only the workers possess, to provide an adequate market for American agriculture. Half-starved labor will be as bad for the farmers as penniless farmers were for industrial labor.

The moral is for economists to cipher out.

DINNER

String Beans Seasoned with Ham or Bacon Fat
Creamed Carrots
Fried Hominy Grits
Rye Bread and Butter
Coffee (adults) Milk (children)

SUPPER

Rice and Onion Soup
Crisp Corn Bread
Muffin Cakes with Crushed Strawberries
Milk for Children

This is the low cost menu suggested by the home economics bureau of the U. S. department of agriculture. It will feed a family of five people.

Today's Recipes

Rice and Onion Soup.—Two tablespoons broken rice, one-half teaspoon salt, two cups water, one cup (cut in half), two cups milk (fresh, evaporated or dried), one-fourth cup salt pork cut in small pieces. Wash the rice and sprinkle slowly into the boiling salted water, add the onion, and cook until the rice is tender. Brown the pork until crisp, remove from the fat. Mix all of these ingredients except the pork with the milk and heat the mixture. When hot remove the onion, add the crisped salt pork and serve.

Vegetables Au Gratin.—Mix two or more kinds of fresh-cooked or left-over vegetables such as string beans, carrots, and turnips or cauliflower, and place in a shallow baking dish. Pour over the vegetables thin white sauce to which cheese may be added if desired. Cover with buttered bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven until the sauce bubbles and the crumbs are brown.

How Ulcer Is Treated

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Three plans of treatment are usually offered to the patient with peptic ulcer. The physician and the patient will take many factors into consideration before arriving at a decision. People write me to say, "What is your treatment for ulcer?" There can be no answer to that question because there are many good treatments and there are many kinds of ulcer—ulcers of different ages, in different positions, of different sizes.

The only general advice that can be given, then, is to explain in what cases the different treatments apply and why.

The three plans referred to in the first paragraph, are, (1) medical and dietetic treatment in bed; (2) ambulatory medical and dietetic treatment, and (3) surgery.

Perhaps the first thing to take into consideration in making a choice is the age of the ulcer—how long the symptoms have been noticed. Many—probably it would be safe to say most ulcers—run a short course and heal up promptly, never to return. Such cases usually can safely be tried on ambulatory treatment—a mild diet of milk, cream, eggs, toast, lean meats and fish, and pureed vegetables combined with the medicinal use of alkalis (sodium bicarbonate and milk of magnesia) at regular intervals throughout the day as instructed by the physician. Some physicians do not believe in alkalization and control the ulcer with diet alone.

For more resistant cases with symptoms that recur year after year for several years, bed rest and very strict supervision are advisable. In this group, which constitutes about two-fifths of all ulcers, the rule is that the symptoms tend to recur. The patient is comfortable under treatment but the treatment may have to be resumed frequently and regularly. This is no cause of discouragement nor for resorting to surgery.

Conservative and experienced surgeons are agreed that surgery should be reserved for the late cases, the medical failures, where symptoms persist even on careful medical routine, and especially for the cases which show signs that the ulcer is obstructing the opening of the stomach into the small intestine.

Twenty years ago surgery was employed for nearly all cases of ulcer. But that early enthusiasm has waned. Nowadays wisdom is on the side of carefully planned dietetic and medical treatment for most cases and for all cases as a preliminary measure. The somewhat cynical remark of a great American surgeon that "surgery is indicated in peptic ulcer only after nine complete medical cures," states the situation very aptly.

Most ulcers, however, are unlike cats. They do not have quite nine lives.

Friend Kept Away From House

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE.

There are times when it seems to me that parents who object to the young men who are courting their daughters are determined to drive said daughters into the objectionable young man's arms willy nilly. Their tactics would lead one to think that that was their aim.

Actually, of course, they are doing their best to discourage the friendship, but their policies are all wrong.

There is the case of Bunny. She and a young man are very much in love. One night they did something they shouldn't—she doesn't say what. Her parents then and there declared that the boy should never come to the house again.

"They said that girl should never see him again. 'It is to laugh!' She does see him and would run off with him if they were a little older. I am surprised they haven't done it. The young folk show surprising sense under the circumstances—much more so than the parents.

"We will gladly wait a year," Bunny writes, but can't wait any longer, because if we can't go together we want to be together as soon as we can."

The young man has said he is sorry, but dad and mother refuse to forgive. "Can't you tell me some way to open their hearts and get them to take him back?" Bunny asks, adding pathetically, "I am afraid that he might go away during this year of not seeing each other and fall in love with someone else and I couldn't bear that." What did the young man do that made it impossible for her parents to forgive him, Bunny? As you also were involved I can hardly think it was anything very dreadful. At any rate, they forgave you, didn't they?

If you are sure that this one act is the only thing your parents have against your boy friend, I would, if I were you, keep coaxing them to take him back. Tell them you don't know that you can stand the situation and may elope with him if they don't give you permission to see him. It's not nice to threaten. I know, but the end justifies the means in this case.

W. M. S. I think you are very wise to wait awhile to see if this girl you love really does care enough for you to marry you. Eighteen years' difference in ages need not necessarily keep you apart. If you are congenial and love one another you would be happy. I think you are right to give her the privilege of going with other fellows, but I'd cut her vigorously just the same. If, in the course of a few months or a year she still says she loves and will marry you, marry her. And good luck.

Wondering: I can't see any particular advantage of being married, secretly, my dear. As you are both so young, why not wait awhile until your boy friend is of age and has a job? It would be more sensible.

Girls Who Freckle Don't Suntan

By GLADY GLAD.

So many, many girls have written to me lately about freckles and suntans that I'm beginning to feel slightly dizzy. For, although I'd like to please all my patient readers, what some folks request only an actual "miracle man" could bring about. Take the girl who freckles easily, and who wants a suntan, for instance. She wants a nice, deep tan, but she doesn't want any freckles. And, I regret to say, she hasn't any more chance of attaining her desires than the man in the moon.

In case you don't know, freckles are an alteration of the pigment under the epidermis after exposure to sun and wind. If you want to get a suntan, naturally you've got to expose yourself to the sun's rays. And if you do this, and you're susceptible to freckles, this alteration of the pigment will occur regardless of what you do. Consequently, you'll naturally be blessed with a flock of undoubtedly unwelcome freckles. Of course, you may eventually acquire a deep enough tan to make the freckles rather unnoticeable. But they'll be there just the same.

The girl who wants to avoid freckles must do two things. She must continually use a good bleach—one that is suited to her own individual skin, of course. And she must keep her skin well protected from the sun's rays.

Lemon juice and peroxide are old standbys, and are good bleaches for lightening freckles. Either bleach should be permitted to dry on the skin, and then a rich cold cream or nourishing cream should be applied to counteract any drying effects. The egg mask described in my "Beauty Culture" booklet is also effective for this purpose.

For skin protection, of course, every possible device should be employed. Wide-brimmed hats, the newly-designed neckshades, beach umbrellas, etc., are all of some help. And before entering into the sunshine, every freckle-susceptible damsel should besmeer her visage plentifully with cold cream, cocoa butter or a preventive cream in order to protect her skin against the sun's rays. Powder used over such an application will remove any unbecoming shine.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED

Two American League softball contests which the Company L, National Guard team is scheduled to play the early part of August, have been moved forward and will be played as part of synthetic double-headers in July.

The Softball Commission explains that this is necessary because of the fact the Xenia guard unit will be encamped at Camp Perry, O., for the annual two-week summer training period.

This being the case, the Ex-High-Company L contest carded for August 2, will be advanced and played off prematurely as part of a double-header July 12, while the Central High-Company L game scheduled for August 9, will be staged as the second half of a twinbill July 19.

When the militia returns from camp, the team will be caught up with the season's schedule, instead of being two weeks behind as would otherwise have been inevitable.

Speaking of Lawrence "Stony" Fuller's fly-catching ability, which used to be a common practice with this department but has been neglected a little of late, the Lang Chevrolet softball team has an opinion, could get along without any other outfielder than Fuller patrolling the pasture at Cox Field.

"Stony" acquired his reputation in past years on local baseball diamonds, and has maintained it since he began playing softball with Langs.

He probably covers more territory than any other outfielder, with either softball league, and once he gets his hands on the ball it is in the "well" so to speak.

Not content with merely catching fly balls that come his way in center field, Fuller raced all around making catches in short field, right field and left field against Anderson's team last week. When fly balls are hit out of the infield, it is customary for the other team's Lang outfielders to make themselves scarce and let Fuller make the catches if humanly possible.

Fifteen cadet athletes who were members of the fine O. S. and S. O. Home track team the past season were awarded letters recently. The letters were white with a red border and of a block design. Recipients of the awards were: Perry Arthur, Robert Blair, Paul Cox, Murray Jones, Robert Jones, George Gates, Glendon Lakes, Paul Long, Lester Pemberton, Lawrence Redding, Abraham Rowe, Philip Schuck, Charles Segner, David Trumphour and George Wolfe. Seven others received honorable mention. Track prospects will also be good next season, though the team may be weaker in field events through loss of experienced boys by graduation.

FARM WOMEN WILL CAMP AT CLIFTON

One of the eight or twelve camps for rural women in Ohio will be held at the 4-H Club Camp site near Clifton July 19-20 and 21, says Miss Ruth Radford, home demonstration agent. This camp will have representatives from Greene, Madison, Clinton, Clark, Fayette and Union counties. It is expected that the largest percent of enrollment will come from Greene County, since the camp site is in that county.

Miss Radford says there have been more expressions of interest in this type of recreation than in previous years. Fifty-five women from Greene County have asked to have information sent to them and ninety-five requests have come from Union, Clark and Fayette counties.

This kind of recreation promises to be a delightful vacation for rural women. The major part of the program is planned so that the campers may get plenty of rest. However it is the plan for a type of handwork as well as some discussion periods on timely subjects will be a part of the program.

Enrollments for this camp will be received at the home demonstration agent's office at the Xenia Federal Bldg.

MT. TABOR FLYERS BEAT CEDARVILLE

A fourth inning rally in which eleven runs were scored, following on the heels of a six-run spurge in the third inning, eventually permitted the Mt. Tabor Flyers to register a 20 to 13 victory over a Cedarville team in a free-hitting softball contest at Cedarville Tuesday night.

Thomas pitched for the Flyers and helped his own cause with a home run. Martindale, first baseman, also hit for the circuit for Cedarville, which used two pitchers, Taylor and Hardy. Score by innings:

MT. Ta. 0 0 6 11 1 0 0 0 2-20
Cedar. 0 0 5 1 1 0 0 0 6-13

Batteries: Mt. Tabor—Thomas and Ford; Cedarville—Taylor, Hardy and Webber.

AMAZED MILITIA VICTIM OF TURNING WORM HERE TUESDAY

Hornick Pitches Four-Hit Ball While Mates Hit Hard

The Ex-High softball team, the same team which had won only one game and lost six this season and had been beaten twice previously by Company "L," National Guard, turned on its tormenter and scored an astonishing 6 to 0 shutout victory over the militia in an American League contest Tuesday night at Cox Field.

"Larry" Hornick pitched masterful ball for the last-placers, giving up only four hits, and his teammates rose to the occasion and accorded him great fielding support. Defensive play of the infield was especially skillful.

"Lefty" Lane, twirling for the Guardians, permitted ten hits but was effective except in the fourth inning when the Ex-Highs, after two were out, grouped four hits with an error and walk to score four runs.

Southdown Lane momentarily lost his effectiveness in this round after scraping his knuckles on the ground in making one of his submarine deliveries. At that, he would not have been scored on if his support had been better, because the Ex-High hits were of the scratch variety.

Nevertheless, Ex-Highs played better ball in all departments and their triumph was a deserved one.

The first Ex-High run came in the third inning, also after two were down on a single by Dinwiddie, an error and a hit by S. Huston. In the fourth, Shaffer's double, singles by Hornick and Banker, an error, a walk and Spahr's hit, resulted in four more runs. Sherman Huston tallied the sixth run in the seventh round, almost unaided when he led off with a single, stole second and third bases and scored on an outfield fly.

Huston was also the only player on either team to get more than one safe hit, contributing two singles. Shaffer's double was the only extra base blow of the contest. Joe Fletcher's defensive play at second base was fine.

Lloyd Downey, who pitched the Xenia Chick Hatchery to a 3 to 0 victory over Anderson's Abattoirs on the first round of play will again try to exercise his authority over the slugging Abattoirs in a featured National League game Wednesday night.

tion on air forces. It said: "All bombing planes to be abolished. This will do away with the military possession of types of planes capable of attack upon civil populations and should be coupled with the total prohibition of all bombardment from the air."

In the naval realm, Mr. Hoover suggested reducing battleships and submarines by one-third below present strength under the Washington and London treaties. No nation, he proposed, should have a submarine tonnage greater than 35,000. He suggested a reduction of one-fourth in the treaty tonnage of aircraft carriers, cruisers, and destroyers.

A short cut to solution of the Franco-Italian naval controversy was suggested by Mr. Hoover. He proposed that in carrying out naval reduction the two Mediterranean countries calculate strength as if they had joined in the London treaty limiting auxiliary ships.

Summarizing his plan, Mr. Hoover said: "These proposals are simple and direct. They call upon all nations to contribute something. The contribution here proposed will be relative and neutral. I know of nothing that would give more hope for humanity today than the acceptance of such a program with such minor changes as might be necessary."

"It is folly for the world to go on breaking its back over military expenditure and the United States is willing to take its share of responsibility by making definite proposals that will relieve the world."

DAMAGE SUIT FILED AGAINST SHERIFF

Suit for $5,000 damages was filed in Common Pleas Court Tuesday by Stanley E. Waller, 605 E. Grand Ave., Springfield, against John Baughn, sheriff of Greene County. Declaring that he was arrested by the sheriff June 6, Waller sets forth he was lodged in jail from 10:30 p. m. that day until 11 a. m. the following morning, when he was released without any charge being placed against him.

According to the petition, Waller and his wife were riding in the rear seat of a friend's auto, being driven east from Dayton toward Xenia, when the machine was stopped near the Beaver Creek Twp. school.

Waller declares he was ordered out of the car and that he was knocked unconscious with a black-jack by Walton Spahr, chief deputy. L. L. Miller is the attorney for Waller.

JACK SHARKEY, NEW CHAMPION, WILL ACCEPT ALL CHALLENGES

NEW YORK, June 22.—Jack Sharkey today challenged the heavyweight fighters of the world to come and get the world's championship he took from Max Schmeling last night—a title many critics said should have remained the German's.

Within fifteen minutes after two judges decided Jack had defeated the dark haired German champion—thereby restoring the title to the United States—Sharkey announced he would be a "fighting champion."

"I won the title, I won it honestly," he said. "Now I will defend it. I will be a fighting champion."

What matter to him the boos the crowd gave the decision? What matter to him the protests of Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager?

What matter to him his own closed left eye?

"I was not hurt," he said. "I am going back to Boston and there will decide on my next plans. But you can say for me that I will keep on fighting."

Sharkey drove his left hand to the heavy-weight championship of the world.

The 75,000 fans who gathered in the spacious new Madison Square Garden bowl watched, many times apathetically, as the gob flicked that arm to the face of the dark-haired young Ulian. Sometimes it was painful. Other times it was just a tantalizing fist which blocked the German.

In the late rounds, Sharkey's left seemed to lose its sting. Schmeling rushed. He jabbed a left that had been held almost tied in the early rounds. He flashed a hard right which jarred Sharkey and closed his left eye.

In fact Schmeling came back so strong that at the close—as the crowd waited tensely for the verdict—there were interminable cheers for "Herr Maxie." When the decision was announced, boos, catcalls and jeers greeted it. The jeers surprised for Sharkey had been the sentimental favorite.

The crowd was not happy that Gunboat Smith, the referee, and George Kelly, a judge, overruled Charley Mathison, who thought Schmeling had won.

PROHIBITION SHOT FIRED WHEN SMITH STARTS CAMPAIGN

not be noticed in a crowd, a self-effacing individual who may, however, hold in his palm the real decision—John F. Curry, leader of Tammany Hall.

He has told no one publicly whom he will support. He is a long standing personal and political foe of Smith, who tried to prevent his selection as leader of the hall.

Roosevelt is certain of perhaps forty of New York's ninety-four delegates. Curry will determine how most of the remainder will go. If he gives them to Roosevelt, the fight is over. Roosevelt is so close to having two-thirds that this push from his own state would have the double-edged effect of cutting the ground out from under Smith and showing Roosevelt actually so close to the finish line that the other delegates with strong Roosevelt second choice sentiment would undoubtedly sweep into line.

This, in brief, was the plot of a thrilling political drama as has been set up in twenty years.

In hotel rooms along "Candidate's Row" dozens of conferences proceeded.

Every train brought in new figures to join the cast in more or less important roles.

William G. McAdoo of California was to take an important part in this convention after an absence of eight years. Not since he and Smith fought their duel for 103 ballots in old Madison Square Garden in 1924 had the son-in-law of the late President Wilson, been a national Democratic factor. But he has come back in his own saddle now. He led the movement in California for Speaker John N. Garner and defeated both Roosevelt and Smith in the primary there.

He has high cards to play now. The first one is for Garner, who has a total of ninety delegates—forty-six from Texas and forty-four from California. Garner's unqualified declaration for outright prohibition repeal in Washington yesterday and McAdoo's approval of the statement has put new life into his wilting boom. His difficulties in handling an unruly house, the criticism of his huge public building bill, and other factors had lost ground for him. But his sharp direct statement on prohibition centered new attention on him today.

However if McAdoo fails to make headway with him, he may—so one report around here went—join in a tacit working arrangement with his old foe, Smith, to hold back Roosevelt while a compromise candidate is agreed upon.

Newton D. Baker of Ohio was one of the most frequently mentioned second-choice figures. Numerous delegations, pledged or instructed for other candidates, favored him as second choice. In event of a deadlock his chances will shoot up rapidly.

Another name worth jotting down on the cuff at this early stage is that of Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago banker. He never saw a railroad train until he was twenty-one years old, his campaign press agents say. He was a Kentucky boy, did some small-town banking in Texas and finally made the big league in Chicago where he heads the First National Bank. He is not regarded as a typical Wall Street banker. In fact he denounced the banking fraternity for its handling of affairs during the boom period and early days of the depression.

Traylor is the man many Roosevelt leaders would like to have for vice-president. They sense in him a corner in national politics. Traylor says he is not interested. In event of a convention deadlock he would be considered as a potential possibility for the presidential nomination.

CHAPTER 42
TOM GOT UP, and lighting a cigarette, strolled over and stood looking out those great wide doors at the tropical scene of which we never seemed to tire; over the blue lagoon and away to Trega. Slowly he blew out a lungful of aromatic smoke.

Holmes was watching him. Suddenly he sat up, caught Tom's eye and pointed to the radio tower. "Go up like a good guy and tell that rat, Livingston, that he pollutes the air around here," he urged.

"It might not be a bad idea to let him know we know he is around here again," Pao seconded. So Tom flipped his cigarette away but not to get homelike for Montagna because we were ready for him."

Pao said quietly: "He at least knows we're on to him."

"Wonder if he has worked out the code yet," Pilly offered.

"You're right, Pilly," Holmes announced. "This thing is a race from here. The first one that 'breaks' that code wins. Let's not waste any more time!"

So the copied sheets were brought out of hiding the necessary paraphernalia gathered to make cypher disks, and the simple system explained to the others. A kitchen table was brought into the living room and the disks tacked on it, one for each of us. Tom and I translated a row of the little figures into their respective letters for each of us.

"The first one to make that jumble of letters read into sensible words give a whoop," I announced. "That will be the code word."

"Use just any five-letter words?" Ione questioned.

"Any word of five letters in the language," I said.

"That narrows it down somewhat," Pao said laconically.

"Your pal, 'The Rat'—or pardon me, is it 'The Skunk' this time?" In any event, he is up against the same grind, Larry," Tom comforted Holmes. "And we're six, while the only help he can get is possibly Utao—none of the rest of them know the language well enough."

"I'll be dipped in mustard, if you aren't a great comfort to me," Larry laughed. It was the first good laugh I had heard from him in hours. It sounded good.

"Well into this haystack after that needle," I said.

There were a few questions Tom and I had to answer on the start, but shortly the machine was running quietly, I remember thinking as we sat there silently working away, that the scene reminded me somehow of a table of tabularis in a newspaper office figuring election returns.

We discovered a serious flaw in the system. There would be a lot of lost motion in duplication. So Pao, from various sources, produced descriptions—but only five could be located. Larry and Pao were given the same letter to work on, each simply checking off a word as they used it. Each of the rest of us was assigned a separate letter. We felt better now that we were systematically getting somewhere.

As the hours passed we worked on in silence. It was monotonous drudgery, but we had the satisfaction of knowing Livingston was up against the same difficulties. Time dragged by.

"Suppose this wasn't encoded with the cypher-disk system," Larry finally suggested.

"It was made from the fact—"

"I was analyzing when all the heads came up and looked from one to the other of us. Suddenly I realized that all our nerves were a bit frayed. I grinned apologetically.

"Suppose we recess," Tom suggested. So we got up, walked around, smoked a cigarette, drank the tall, cold drinks which Pakai brought in answer to Pao's summons. Then we fell to work again.

It must have been something after 5 o'clock when Holmes gave his disk a couple of savage twists and pushed his chair back disengagedly.

"Suppose we recess," Tom suggested. So we got up, walked around, smoked a cigarette, drank the tall, cold drinks which Pakai brought in answer to Pao's summons. Then we fell to work again.

It must have been something after 5 o'clock when Holmes gave his disk a couple of savage twists and pushed his chair back disengagedly.

"I was analyzing when all the heads came up and looked from one to the other of us. Suddenly I realized that all our nerves were a bit frayed. I grinned apologetically.

"Suppose we recess," Tom suggested. So we got up, walked around, smoked a cigarette, drank the tall, cold drinks which Pakai brought in answer to Pao's summons. Then we fell to work again.

National Open To Be Broadcast This Week

By MILDRED MASON

THE National Open Golf Championship, the country's greatest event of the links, will be put on the air at various times over NBC networks during the three days of play, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Al Morrison, golf authority, instructor and author of many books on the game, will act as chief NBC announcer during the broadcasts which will originate at the Fresh Meadow Country Club at Flushing, L. I. He will be assisted by Edward Thorgensen, NBC staff announcer.

During the first two days of play, Thursday and Friday, Morrison will give a summary of results as soon as the last players are in, commenting on the more interesting aspects of the contest. On Saturday he will go on the NBC network at frequent intervals giving the latest standings and describing exciting developments right up to the climax, the winning stroke.

Revive Civil War Days.
Tales of the old days will be heard during a special program to be broadcast from the forty-second annual United Confederate Veterans reunion at Richmond, Va., over an NBC network Thursday at 5 p. m. General C. A. de Saussure, commander-in-chief of the U. V. C., and other war veterans of the gray will exchange reminiscences of Civil War campaigns, and a group of old time fiddlers will contribute typical music of the old South.

Sophie Tucker Is Guest.
Sophie Tucker, favorite of radio and stage audiences, will be heard as guest artist with Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees on their program Thursday evening. This program will be heard over an NBC network through WSAI, Cincinnati, at 7 p. m.

British Band on Air.
Jack Payne and his orchestra, favorites of London's gay night life, will be heard during a program over an NBC network through WSAI, Cincinnati, Thursday at 9 p. m. Walter Winchell, radio columnist, and Joe Moss and his orchestra playing from Chicago, will be heard on the same program.

Orchestra On NBC.
Cliff Perrine's Orchestra, which has often played at social functions here, will be heard over an NBC network, playing from Wildwood Park through station KSTP, St. Paul, starting July 4. The orchestra will be on the air every Tuesday and Friday evening from 11:30 o'clock to midnight. As a special attraction RKO stars will be featured on the program with the orchestra every Tuesday evening. The orchestra is composed of eleven members, including Forest Hurley, Xenia.

Drama In Film Test Shows Stars At Best

The talkie studios grind out each year more than 380 miles of film containing more hopes, aspirations and drama than a dozen program pictures and yet are destined never to be seen by the fans.

The 2,000,000 or so feet of celluloid are the studios' contribution in the never ending quest for new stars. Chopped up into 300-foot lengths, the films are known as "screen tests" and form a little industry all by themselves.

Prominent directors, expert camera and sound men and clever make-up artists are assigned from time to time for screen test work. And all to give the prospective subject the very best "break" possible in his bow to the talkies. Producers spend a pretty penny on screen tests. The chances of picking a bright star out of a test run into infinitesimal fractions, but they claim it's worth the expense.

Not all tests are for embryo actors and actresses. Many of them test make-up of established stars for roles they will portray. Fredric March had 9,000 feet of make-up tests for his role in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Wynne Gibson took nine separate tests for three roles in "The Strange Case of Clara Deane". The overworked "personality" is still the big item in the success recipe. Mere good looks don't go any more, as countless stars prove. Voice is all-important and so are education, training, poise and ability.

Plenty of names are being added by Universal to the cast of "Air Mail", the story by Lt. Col. Frank Wead and Dale Van Every. Charles de la Motte, Beth Milton, Louise McIntosh, Katherine Perry and Lew Kelly are the latest placed on the roster. The featured players previously assigned are Ralph Bellamy, Pat O'Brien, Slim Summerville, Gloria Stuart, Russell Hopton and Lillian Bond. John Ford is the director and the film is now in its fourth week.

Universal, incidentally, has decided to film another football picture this fall, because of the success of "The Spirit of Notre Dame." Christy Walsh has signed practically the complete All America aggregation of last year for the picture. Jack Riley, the Northwestern tackle and Clarence Munn, Minnesota lineman, have a chance to participate in the Olympic games and their part in the picture will not be made until the games are over.

Baker, Shaver and Pinkert of South Carolina, Orsi of Chicago, Dalrymple of Tulane, Yarr and Schwartz of Notre Dame, Cain of Alabama and Quast of Pittsburgh, are others signed. The team is that picked by Walsh through the Antioch commencement exercises began Sunday morning when the senior girls' breakfast was held in the garden at Spruce Cottage. The baccalaureate sermon was delivered Sunday evening by Mr. Morgan, president of Antioch College. The junior prom will be Thursday evening. At 4 o'clock Friday afternoon President and

Mrs. Morgan will hold a reception for the seniors and their friends at their home on the lawn. In the evening the alumni dinner will be served in the college dining room, followed by the senior class play. "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which will be given on the college steps. The commencement address will be given at 10 o'clock Saturday morning by Rev. Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland. Funeral services of Howard

Adams were held Saturday afternoon at the Littleton Bros funeral parlors on Xenia Ave. Burial in Glen Forest Cemetery. Mr. Adams died at his home in Xenia Wednesday. He is survived by his wife and two children, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Adams, east of town, one sister, Mrs. David Swartz of Springfield and three brothers, James of Springfield, Corwin and Charles, near town. Mr. and Mrs. Abner Knight and son and daughter of Urbana, Ill., were here Wednesday calling on old friends. Mrs. Knight will be remembered as Miss Mabel Cathers, a former resident of this place. Rev. and Mrs. Carl White, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Coe and Mrs. Ora Bland are in Wooster this week attending the Presbytery. Mrs. Ed Meredith and daughter, Miss Margaret and granddaughter, Mary Lou Funderburg and Mrs. F. L. Curry returned home Thursday from a motor trip to Fort Morgan, Colorado, where they visited Mrs. Meredith's daughter, Mrs. Ezra Bausman. Mrs. Curry also visited Rev. and Mrs. Lewis, who formerly lived here and are now living in Lincoln, Nebraska. Miss Clara Zell left Saturday for Chautauqua, New York, where she will attend the convention as a delegate from the Clark County Red Cross Association. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Brewer and

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Brewer spent Friday in Cincinnati. Mrs. Donald Vance and son Don Jr., of Pennsylvania, are visiting her father, Mr. H. R. Adams. The Y. M. C. A. Camp Knolls will open Wednesday with Miss Margaret West in charge as camp director, and Miss Elizabeth Hunt, Girl Reserve secretary, will be program director. Plans are made for a big season and many attractions in the way of overnight hikes swimming, tennis, baseball and canoeing have been planned. Mrs. Ora Bland of St. Louis, is visiting her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Coe. Robert Gibbs, who has been attending Wesleyan College in Middletown, Conn., returned home Saturday for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. David Shellhaas of Ludlow Falls, spent Sunday with Mrs. Shellhaas' sister, Mrs. C. A. Brewer and family.
